Classmates seem to have their hands full in using subtle persuasion on 'professor' in "Spirit of the Y" film being shown across the United States, Canada, and in Europe.

Remember Heritage' Elder Cullimore Urges

We should remember our rich pioneer heritage," said Elder James A. Cullimore Tuesday in devotional assembly.

Elder Cullimore is an assistant of the Council of Twelve Apostles, arch of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

He spoke of the trials the pioneers had to face and their perseverance to withstand persecution for the right cause. "They were silent to the law," he said, "through industry and great organization, the pioneers built Nauvoo—twice the size of Chicago—in a beautiful temple. "The came, members were driven from their homes; the exodus had begun."

He spoke of the trials the pioneers crossed the Mississippi River and established Winter Quarters. "Six hundred men died during the ravishing winds." Finally they started a trek across Nebraska and Wyoming. "They had courage and were motivated by the Love of God," Elder Cullimore stated.

"No price was too great to pay what they knew was right."

Brigham Young listened to the promptings of the Lord and organized the journey with divine inspiration. Following their arrival in Salt Lake, colonizers were sent to the surrounding country to develop it as we know it today.

"May we remember what they have done for us," Elder Cullimore said in closing.

Book Review Set Today

The controversial book, "Death of a President," will be reviewed today by Dr. J. Keith Melville at 11 a.m. in the Little Theatre, 321 ELWC.

Associate professor of political science, Dr. Melville will appear as a guest speaker for the Academic Book Review Committee.

"Death of a President," written by William Manchester at the request of Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy and the late president's brother, Robert, has caused international controversy.

Communist Escapee To Speak

Dr. George Vesely, who escaped from Communist Czechoslovakia, will speak at the Brigham Young University Forum Series Thursday at 10 a.m. in de-Jong Concert Hall.

A member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Czechoslovakia, Dr. Vesely will relate some experiences of the persecution of the Church members under Communist conditions.

WRITING EXPERIENCE

Before coming to United States, he had several technical articles, poems and stories published in Czechoslovakia. However, they were soon forbidden by Communists because he refused to subscribe to materialism.

A clinical psychologist, Dr. Vesely is now employed with the Salt Lake City Board of Education as a school psychologist.

'Spirit of the Y' Film Now Available

Brigham Young University's latest motion picture production, "The Spirit of the Y," is now available for use at the Educational Media Services and in branch libraries across the country.

The film has had such an impact on the public since its release last February, in summarizing the goals, ideals and philosophies of BYU, that branch offices from New York to Los Angeles and as far north as Canada have obtained the film for use.

COMPACT PACKAGE

Film director Richard Bickerton of the BYU Motion Picture Studio said, "We think it's really a compact package." After the first editing the film was 30 minutes long. "Now we've cut it down to 30, and there's still the continuity and impact that we wanted it to have," he added.

According to Mr. Bickerton, everyone in the motion picture studio was involved in making the film. Scott Whitaker and Carol Lynn Pearson wrote the script, while Mr. Bickerton directed and edited it.

FOREIGN LANGUAGES

The film, which is narrated by Salt Lake radio announcer Charles Freed, has had one television showing locally, and the BYU student body has had several prints made into foreign languages for use in Europe.

Several student body officers and many administrative officials have given their cooperation, influence and encouragement to the making of the film.

Stephen R. Covey, administrative assistant to the president, said "the film has a good historical sense and captures the flavor and climate of BYU at present." Director of the Alumni Association, Ronald Hyde, expressed his appreciation for the historical aspects of the film. He said that it has already been used by alumni in California and Utah to promote BYU.

Raymond E. Beckham of the University Development Office added, "We use the film in showing to our people the uniqueness of BYU in today's educational world. It effectively summarizes the goals, ideals and philosophies

Europeans Impressed With Y Intertainers

Ambassador Applauds BYU Group Success

(Editor's Note: The following is a letter written by Ambassador W. Tapley Bennett, Jr. to Senator Wallace F. Bennett regarding the present European tour by BYU's International Folk Dancers.)

Dear Senator Bennett: I want to write to tell you what a great success the folk dancing and singing group from Brigham Young University has been here in Portugal. The recent visit was a repeat of their visit to Portugal last year.

The primary purpose of their visit was to appear at a National Agricultural Fair at Santarem, around an hour and a half drive up the Tagus River from Lisbon. They also gave performances in other nearby communities and in an International Folk Festival here in Lisbon, and appeared on Portuguese television.

UNIVERSALLY WELCOMED
Several Portuguese groups took part in some or all of these affairs and there were groups from several European countries including Belgium, Bulgaria, France, Ireland, Italy and Spain. True to Communist practice, the Bulgarians sent a highly-skilled, professional group; other national groups were well-coordinated and of long experience. But our young people from Brigham Young University were unquestionably the big hit. They were the ones the people wanted to see, and they were universally welcomed and applauded. People of all walks of life have commented to me about "the young Americans" on the television program, and I think it fair to say that this has caused more comment at different levels of the population than any other event in my year here—at least more people have spoken to me about it.

On my first meeting with the group at the Agricultural Fair I was so impressed with the clean, outgoing qualities of all these pretty girls and fine looking young men that I went back the second day at their request and had the pleasure of marching with them in the international parade which wound through the streets of the medieval town.

In the evening performance which went on until two in the morning, when I went forward to the platform at the urging of the Festival Director and the young Brigham Young University student who performs the Indian dance to receive an Indian feather, there was very warm applause from an audience of about three thousand people to show their appreciation of the American presence.

INVOLVED IN SONGFEST

When the group came down to Lisbon I had the opportunity of having them all to the residence for a late afternoon gathering. After being away from home for a while they all seemed to enjoy the hamburgers which they had been missing in the local diet. For our part, it gave us an opportunity to invite some Portuguese university students; the resulting party was a treat for the neighborhood.

I just thought you might be interested on an account of the impression made in this country by some of these young people from your state. It was one of most impressive groups I have seen in a long time, and I think we need to worry about broad appeal of our country people abroad when we have standing representatives like Brigham Young University going traveling and making friends.

With warm personal regards

Yours very sincerely
W. Tapley Bennett,
Ambassador

NAM Seeks To End Communications Gap Of Industry-Campus

The first in a series of 15-minute programs for college campus radio stations has just been recorded by the National Association of Manufacturers for release this fall.

The programs are designed to help close the campus-industry communications gap, the NAM said.

Nine programs—one a month from September through May, 1968—will be offered free to 45 campus radio stations throughout the country.

CAMPUS RADIO SPECIALISTS

The series is being programmed and directed by NAM and produced and distributed by Radio-TV Features Inc., a New York communications firm which specializes in campus radio programming.

"The programs will give students a chance to ask business leaders directly the 'no holds barred' questions young people have been posing about the role of business in our society, and about the opportunities in business for young people who are anxious to serve mankind idealistically," the NAM explained.

The association said that a wide range of topics will be covered in the series, each program featuring different participants. Only the program moderator, Sherman B. Cluckering, youthful publisher of the campus magazine, Moderator, will be on all the programs.

"BUSINESS FOR BIRDS"

The as-yet-unnamed radio series is the result of an NAM campus-industry relations program which began last year following opinion surveys which showed that an increasing number of top students felt "business is for the birds."

NAM's initial conference on the problem, held last year in New York, proved so popular that others were subsequently staged in San Francisco and Milwaukee, Wis. A fourth will be held October 12 in Greensboro, N. C.

World Food Crisis Demands Major Long-Term Effort by All Nations

Experts who have completed a year-long study of the world food problem for President Johnson have concluded that "with a maximum effort by all nations," developing and developed alike, the food/population crisis can be solved during the next 20 years.

LOOK FOR SOLUTIONS

A panel of President's Science Advisory Committee comprised of more than 100 experts and consultants drawn from the Federal Government, universities, foundations, and industry, stressed that the solution will require major programs to accomplish the job.

Highlights of the first of a 3-volume report are:

(1) Food and Population. While overall world food requirements will rise by about 50 percent, the requirements in the developing nations are expected to double by 1985. Voluntary programs of family planning must be supported and expanded in the developing countries to assure a long-range adjustment of food needs in conjunction with population control.

FOOD SYNTHESIS A NECESSITY

(2) Food synthesis. No "panacea" will appear in an easy answer to worldwide food shortages such as synthesis of food from petroleum or algae, or similar processes. Research and development on food-synthesis is essential, but it will be several years before any decision about the usefulness of new processes will be possible because of technical problems and cost.

(3) Agricultural development. Although agricultural development is accorded its rightful place by both donors and recipients of foreign aid, the imbalance between world's food supply and its population will continue to outpace efforts to meet the increasing need.

DEVELOP FOREIGN COUNTRIES

(4) Capital investment. Huge investment of capital will be needed for irrigation, fertilizer, new varieties, pesticides, and agricultural machinery if subsistence farming in developing countries is to be transformed into modern commercial farming.

(5) Economic assistance. There must be long-term support of overall economic assistance in the developing countries. Evident alleviation of world hunger is dependent on far-reaching social reforms, a long-range program of hard work which offers no promise of quick and dramatic results.

MANPOWER REQUIRED

(6) Manpower. The annual capital investment that will be required to increase food demand to levels required to meet needs is approximately 4 per cent of the GNP of the developing countries, amounting to about $12 billion for 1965.

Despite these enormous requirements for capital investment, the greatest problem to be faced is shortage of trained manpower through technical assistance programs the U. S. should emphasize, guidance, education, and the development of indigenous capability for the long term, because the task in the developing nations has or just begun.

Computer Network Begins Operation

The world's largest commercial information processing network went into operation in Boston, Mass., recently.

It's a $15-million system, affecting one in every five persons in the United States and Canada. It will link 900 field offices of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company with a single huge computer at the company's headquarters in New York, and with a similar system in Canada.

'The Miser'

by Connie Gray
Universe Staff Writer

the Miser," by French playwright Moliere, is the hilarious story of a covetous old man and his family, friends, and servants who are forced to put up with him.

"The Miser" is especially valuable as a satire on human foibles, as it induces his audience to look at universal weaknesses of according to Dr. Charles W. nan, drama professor at "We learn to know human while we are being amused; the wise kindness of the dramatists who sympathize with rather than condemn its eternal follies."

For example, the miser as an individual constantly scheming to gain more wealth. Because of his obsession for riches, he causes hardships on those closest to him. His daughter is typical of all who try to circumvent a father's wishes.

"You can't win for losing," is a philosophy adopted by the cook when he laments the cause of truth. He was beaten when he told the truth and nearly incarcerated for lying.

"The Miser" was produced at BYU by the Theatre Workshop, a training ground for junior and senior high school students.

The cast of "The Miser" did a fine job. Harpagon, alias the Miser, was played by Thomas Nibley. Nibley really stole the show.

Charles Pipkin played Valere, the passionate semi-fiance of the miser's daughter. Sheryl Sutter played the role of the beautiful covetous daughter, Elise. Elise's indebted brother, Clonte, was ably portrayed by Brent Nash.

Other good portrayals were the roles of La Fleche, played by John Wickens; Froisne, the beautiful buxom blonde marriage arranger, Foster Lambert; sweet, innocent Marianne, Melaine Miller; and Maître Jacques, aptly portrayed by Kerry Deuel.

Also appearing were: Douglas Smith as Anselme; Claudia Tibbs as Mistress Simon; Lynda Hancock as Dame Claude; Peggy Brinkman as Brindavone; Skylar Weeks as La Merluiche; and Kim Wilberg as the Commissaire de Police.

"Golden Boy" is the story of a sensitive man trying to find himself who forsakes his violin for prize fighting.

According to Dr. Preston R. Gledhill, director, this play is the type that requires strong involvement by the audience.

Title role is played by David Call, a communications major from Tucson, Arizona. The leading lady, Lorna Moon, will be played by Anne Milburn, a drama major from England. Richard Pollman, drama instructor from Reno, Nev., plays three different roles.

Students will be admitted free with their activity cards. The play will run for one night only.

Rooms Removed For Shelf Space

Two rooms were removed in the BYU Library Friday to provide more book space.

According to the Assistant Director of the library, Donald T. Smith, the new books will be in historical, biographical, and genealogical fields.

Paul Paxton of Stahl Construction in Orem said that the rooms were built so that they could be easily removed. One tap of the hammer was enough for each brick. The classroom space lost will be gained back in the new JKB extension and in other buildings.
